The Kenosha Council of Catholic Men (KCCM) was founded by Joseph C. Sturycz. Its various functions included the federation of Catholic men's groups, to be a central clearinghouse for information on lay activities, to promote lay cooperation, to help existing Catholic lay organizations on the local level, to contribute to national and international movements with moral questions, and to inculcate appreciation of Catholic principles in society. Part of the principles of the KCCM was to “ensure proper recognition and representation of Catholic/Christian principles when addressing committees and problems of local, national and international importance.”
